DECODED × ROVIQ

"10,000 streetwear brands have a Shopify store. None of them have a speakeasy."

Prepared for Decoded Shop | February 2026 | Confidential

1. Where Things Stand

We went through everything—the website, socials, SEO, email, paid ads, the whole setup. The short version: the brand itself is solid. “Decoded Noir,” “Hand of God,” the 911 Turbo aesthetic, “806 The Show”—that stuff is real, and you can’t fake it. But the systems around it? They’re not doing the brand any favors right now.

Area	Grade	What’s Going On
Website	D-	No custom domain, no product descriptions on any of the 37+ SKUs, stock Shopify template
Social Media	D	Instagram only, 0.27% engagement on 20.4K followers, nothing on TikTok
Email / SMS	F	$0 coming in from email or SMS—there’s no way to capture anyone
Paid Ads	N/A	Nothing running at all
Revenue Setup	Critical	AOV around $68, no upsells, no bundles, no cart recovery

The biggest issue isn’t getting people to the site. It’s that once they leave, there’s no way to bring them back. No email, no push, no community. Every customer who doesn’t buy on their first visit is gone for good.

2. The Big Idea: A Digital Speakeasy

Most agencies would tell you to clean up the Shopify store, run some ads, and move on. We think that misses the point. Decoded isn’t just a clothing brand—it’s a world. So we want to build it like one.

The idea is to turn the app into a digital speakeasy—not a store you browse, but a place you belong to. Think MSCHF: every time you open the app, something different is happening. You don’t open it to shop. You open it because you’re curious what’s going on. The buying just happens naturally. Decoded’s constant drops are perfect for that. The website stays as a clean, dark storefront for discovery, but the app is where the real experience lives.

Here’s what that looks like in practice:

- A cinematic startup sequence that feels like turning over a 911 Turbo
- Actual arcade games hidden inside the app (not just loyalty points)
- 15-minute “Flash Raid” drop windows that show up without warning
- Podcast codes that unlock secret content in the app
- A “Vault Lock” where unsold pieces get pulled forever—never sold again
- A tiered community: Decoded → Noir → Elite

Nobody at Decoded’s level has anything like this. That’s the whole point.

3. Phase 1: Quick Website Fixes — Weeks 1–2

The app is the main play, but we can't have the website actively working against the brand in the meantime. This isn't a full rebuild—it's a fast cleanup: dark luxury look, fill in the obvious gaps, and point everything toward the app download.

What We're Doing	When
Get a real domain (decoded.shop or similar)	Day 1
Dark luxury redesign with full-bleed imagery	Week 1
Write product descriptions for all 37+ SKUs	Week 1–2
Build out a proper About / brand story page	Week 1
Add a persistent "Get the App" banner sitewide	Week 1
Size guide, returns policy, remove "Powered by Shopify"	Week 1
Set up email capture through Klaviyo (popup + footer + welcome flow)	Week 2
Hide sold-out products, clean up dead inventory	Day 1

4. Phase 2: The App — Weeks 2–8

How We're Building It

We're going native iOS with Swift. Randy already built the AC Blacksite app this way—cinematic onboarding, a hidden Space Invaders game, smooth native feel—so there's no learning curve. Native gives us way better performance for the games (SpriteKit), the animations (Core Animation), and the haptic feedback that makes interactions feel physical. We're starting iOS-only because Decoded's audience skews heavily iPhone, and iOS users consistently spend 2–3x more on premium mobile purchases. Android can come later once we've proven the model works.

On the backend: Shopify Storefront API handles the catalog and checkout, Firebase or Supabase manages user profiles, game scores, and memberships, and a lightweight Node.js server handles game logic, drop scheduling, and push notifications through FCM and APNs.

The First Thing People See

When someone opens the app for the first time, they don't get a login screen. They get a movie. A 911 Turbo tachometer climbing to redline with real engine audio, a quick cinematic montage, then a fingerprint-unlock gate that opens into "Choose Your Lane"—Decoded or Decoded Noir. That immediately segments users and validates the two-tier brand in real time. After that: pick a code name, drop your email, opt into push. They're in.

What's in the App (V1)

Screen	What It Does
Home	Dynamic hero that changes with each drop, countdown timer, hidden Vault entry
The Drop Zone	Live drops with timers, surprise Flash Raids (15 min), Versus Drops where users vote on colorways, Noir early access

Screen	What It Does
The Vault	Hidden games: “Midnight Run” (2D racer) and “The Confessional” (podcast trivia). Global leaderboard. Shareable scorecards.
Shop	Full Shopify catalog synced in real time, product pages, cart, checkout
Noir Lounge	VIP section: exclusive content, Noir-only drops, founder Q&As;, tier progress
Profile	Order history, membership tier, game stats, referral code, notification settings

How Drops Work

Every drop follows a rhythm. 72 hours out, a push notification hits with a blurred teaser. At 1 hour, another push goes out. When it goes live, the app shifts into “Drop Mode”—darker UI, ambient sound change, live viewer count. Noir members get unblurred previews 24 hours early.

Flash Raids are the wildcard: zero warning, 15-minute window, then it’s gone. Versus Drops pit two colorways against each other—users vote, the loser gets permanently locked. If something doesn’t sell out in 48 hours, the Vault Lock kicks in and the remaining stock gets pulled forever. And 1–2 times a quarter, we run app-exclusive drops that aren’t on the site or IG—forcing downloads.

Podcast Tie-In

“806 The Show” is a huge untapped asset. During episodes, verbal codes get dropped that unlock hidden content in the app. The trivia game pulls questions straight from podcast lore. New drops get teased at the end of episodes. It creates a loop: the podcast pushes people into the app, the app gives people reasons to listen, and both drive sales.

Community Tiers

Tier	What You Get	How to Get In
Decoded (Free)	Shop, drops, basic games, push notifications	Download the app
Noir ($15/mo or $300 spent)	24h early access to all drops, Noir Lounge, exclusive colorways, free shipping	Subscribe or hit $300 lifetime spend
Elite (Top 1%)	Vote on colorways, ultra-limited product line, direct founder access	Invite only—top scorers + biggest spenders

5. Phase 3: Launch & Growth — Weeks 8–12

The launch rolls out in two beats. Week 1 is all tease—dark, moody IG Stories, a cinematic TikTok trailer, a dedicated podcast episode with the first verbal code, and an email blast giving the Klaviyo list early access. Week 2 is the real thing: the app goes live with a simultaneous app-exclusive drop. First product in the app, available nowhere else.

Realistically, we’re looking at 300–600 installs in Month 1, which is 1.5–3% of the 20K IG following. At a 15–25% install-to-purchase rate, that’s 75–125 orders through the app in the first month alone.

After launch, Instagram becomes the app-install machine. Bio link swaps to the app download. Product teasers get “APP ONLY” watermarks. Leaderboard screenshots and shareable scorecards create organic discovery. TikTok kicks off with dark, moody 7–15 second loops and “I found a secret store” content.

Paid ads start in Month 3, once we know the app converts. $2,750/mo total: $1,500 on Meta app-install ads, $750 on TikTok, $500 on retargeting. At a $2–$5 cost per install and $68 AOV, the math works on the first order.

6. Down the Road: “The Cache” Subscription Boxes (Q2+)

This isn’t part of the initial build—it’s where we go once the app has traction (200+ active users). Think of them as quarterly physical DLC packs for the app. Every box has items that interact with the app: QR codes that trigger cinematic unboxing animations, NFC cards that grant early drop access.

Tier	Price/Quarter	What’s Inside
Drop Box	$65	Exclusive tee or accessory, mystery item from recent drops, QR unlock card
Noir Box	$120	Everything above + Noir-tier piece, NFC early-access card, premium packaging
Elite Crate (invite only)	$200	Everything above + numbered limited item, collab piece, VIP event access

1 in every 50 boxes gets a Black Card—a metal card worth $500 in Decoded credit. That alone turns every unboxing into potential content. At 140 subscribers, this brings in roughly $48,400/year. At 200+, it clears $56K.

7. Where This Goes Long-Term

By Month 6, the goal is 60% of revenue coming through the app. The website becomes a clean front window for SEO and Google traffic. Instagram handles awareness. The app handles conversion and keeps people coming back.

The app also gives us data the website never could: which drop categories get people excited, when people are most active, how Noir members buy compared to free users, which referral codes actually work. That intelligence shapes every decision going forward.

And over time, the app becomes the thing competitors simply can’t copy. Game scores, Noir status, earned rewards, purchase history—it all creates switching cost. Add leaderboard competition, exclusive content, and the identity of being “Decoded Elite,” and you’ve got a moat that no amount of money can buy.

What’s Next	When	Cost
Vault Game Season 2 (new mechanics, new rewards)	Quarter 2	$2,000
Android version	Quarter 2–3	$4,000–$6,000
NFC Black Card physical artifacts for Elite tier	Quarter 3	$1,500
AR virtual try-on	Month 6+	$3,000
Community challenges	Quarter 2	Included in retainer

8. The Numbers

V1 Build — $8,500 (one-time)

This covers everything: the website triage (domain, redesign, product descriptions for every SKU, brand story, Klaviyo email capture, app-download funnel), plus the full app build (cinematic onboarding, all six core screens, both Vault games, Shopify sync, push notification system, backend infrastructure, and App Store submission).

Half upfront ($4,250), half when we submit to the App Store ($4,250).

Week	What Happens
1	Project setup, Shopify API hookup, app skeleton, website triage starts
2	Onboarding screens built, home screen, countdown components, website triage wraps up
3	Shop screens and Shopify checkout integration
4	Drop Zone and push notification system
5	Midnight Run game (sprites, scoring, leaderboard)
6	The Confessional game, Noir Lounge, Profile, polish
7	Testing on real devices, App Store screenshots and assets, submission
8	Buffer for Apple’s review process, bug fixes, resubmission if needed

Monthly Retainer — Two Options

	Essential — $1,500/month	Full Service — $2,500/month
Drop Campaigns	Push sequences for up to 4 drops/month (standard drops only)	Full push sequences for every drop type (standard, Noir, Flash Raid, Versus)
Push Notifications	4–6 pushes/month, pre-built templates	8–12 pushes/month with custom copy, segmentation, and A/B testing
App Content	Home screen hero updates for each drop	Hero updates + Noir Lounge content publishing (2–4 pieces/month) + Drop Zone management
Game Management	Leaderboard monitoring, basic upkeep	Full leaderboard management, reward coordination, quarterly rotation planning
Podcast Sync	—	Programming verbal code unlocks for each “806 The Show” episode
Social Strategy	—	Content calendar tied to drops, templates and copy for 3–4 IG posts/week, TikTok direction
Analytics	Quarterly summary report	Monthly report: installs, DAU/MAU, push performance, conversion by drop, Noir growth
App Maintenance	Critical bug fixes and OS compatibility updates	Bug fixes, minor feature additions, Shopify sync maintenance, OS updates
Strategy Calls	—	30-minute monthly call to review metrics and plan next month

Both options have a 3-month minimum, then month-to-month after that. If monthly revenue crosses $30K, we'll reevaluate to match the bigger workload.

Year 1 Total

	Essential Plan	Full Service Plan
V1 App Build	$8,500	$8,500
Monthly Retainer (12 months)	$18,000	$30,000
Total	$26,500	$38,500

What We Expect That to Generate

Revenue Source	Year 1 Projection
Email/SMS flows (Klaviyo)	$15,000–$30,000
App-driven sales (push + drop urgency)	$40,000–$80,000
Noir memberships (30 members × $15/mo × 12)	$5,400+
Subscription boxes (if launched Q2+)	$48,000+
Conservative total (without boxes)	$60,000–$115,000
With subscription boxes	$108,000–$163,000+

Either plan pays for itself within the first two quarters, before subscription boxes are even in the picture.

9. Why Us

Randy already built this kind of thing. The AC Blacksite app—cinematic onboarding, hidden game, premium native feel in Swift—that's the same playbook we're running here, applied to Decoded's world.

We also get the culture. We know why MSCHF works, why Corteiz does scavenger hunts, why Hellstar's founder story matters more than the clothes. Streetwear runs on identity, scarcity, and belonging. That's what this app is built on.

And you get one team. Strategy, design, development, marketing—all under one roof. No handoffs, no gaps. The retainer scales with your revenue, so our incentives stay lined up. We do better when you do better.

10. What Happens Next

Roviq sends over the SOW and an invoice for the 50% deposit ($4,250). Website triage kicks off Day 1. App development starts Week 1. First milestone check-in happens at the end of Week 2.

10,000 streetwear brands have a Shopify store. Nobody has a speakeasy. Let’s build yours.
